MASSACHUSETTS ELECTION.—There does not seem to have been any election of Governor by the people Both branches of the Legislature, upon which the election devolves, are largely Whig. "To refer again to the emancipation question: It has been the mill-stone which, for the present at any rate, has sunk most of the leading men in the State. Besides, Mr. Clay, Judge Underwood, late U. "His personal appearance is by no means prepossessing. Streched out, he is about six feet. He has a stoop, as though he were looking for something lost upon the ground. His eyes read in every stone a nest egg of chicane, and through the glasses of his golden spectacles, his grey eyes almost pop out. He carries his hands in his pockets, as if he were afraid sixty-'an old coon.'"

JENNY LIND AND BARNUM.-We have already referred to a rumor that Barnum, the curiosity hunter, had made Jenny Lind, the Musical celebrity, the offer to sing in this country. This reference has drawn from the former a letter, which the public is interested in, and which, therefore, we publish, mainly as

1st. Jenny Lind has never sent an agent to this country, but I have sent two agents to her within twelve months. One of these agents returned last week, and has started again for Stockholm to offer her definite proposals for me.

2d. As regards the terms of Jenny Lind, Mr. Knowles, the manager of the theatre at Manchester. Eng., engaged her to sing for him in the provincial towns, for which, I understand and believe, he paid her £400 sterling per night. I also understand and believe that while she sang at the Queen's Theatre, in London, the house usually contained £2,000 sterling per night.

The idea, therefore, is absurd, that I would expect her to sing two hundred nights in America for $50,000 more than four times that sum per night, besides paying all expenses from Stockholm, of herself, two servants, a companion, and a financier, (probably her penses connected with concerts, operas, &c., and plain London to secure the fulfilment of my proposition. visit America on more favorable terms than I have named, I stand ready to sign a bond to give him $50 tions, which are of common and universal interest." for every $100 that he will engage her for less than stories told of Judge B——, one of the associate judges of D—— county. He is remarkably deliberate and pompous in his style of conversation, wears a white cravat with a huge tie, a very high shirt collar, and is altogether (as he thinks) a great man. Among other offices, the judge holds that of superintendent of one of the Sunday schools, and not long since startled his auditory by the following touching appeal: "My dear children, you will remember that in a sbort time you must all die, and stand before a great Judge; yes, a far greater judge than the one that now addresses you!

Picking up an Acquaintance.

BY THE " YOUNG 'UN." Some months since, a joyous, courageous young woman, residing in this city, the daughter of highly respectable parents, found herself somewhat unintenionally detained at the house of a friend, not far distant from her father's house, one evening, and before she was aware of the fact, scarcely, night had set in The distance to her own home was but a few blocks, however, and as she expected a little gathering of ladies and gentlemen that evening at her father's, she determined on returning home unattended; and, bidding her friends good night, she hurried along upon the walk towards her residence, into which her fam-

Upon turning the first corner, she was suddenly startled by the approach of a well dressed young man, who accosted her with a "good evening," and offered his services to escort her home! Alarmed, for an instant, she would have avoided the stranger; but as he advanced to her side, she ventured to turn towards him, and a glance satisfied her-she recognised the young gentleman as a familiar acquaintance. Disguising her voice, and replying in a timid tone, she accepted the proffered gallantry, determined at once to administer a lesson to her young friend, which he should not forget. The conversation which passed was brief, and the beau suspecting nothing, as he was not aware that the family had changed their quarters, tripped along at the young lady's side, apparently very well pleased with his companion. In a few min-utes they halted before a modest brick house, in a somewhat retired street at the west end, and the lady relinquished her attendant's arm.

"Will you come in ?" whispered the lady, softly. "Thank you," was the reply; and his fair compan-on opened the front door. Closing it carefully, they found themselves in the entry, in total darkness. "Wait a moment," said the young woman, " and be perfectly quiet. I will return instantly;" and with these words, she ascended the stairs which led to the parlors. The first thought of the young man, as he retired, was to open the front door and move! for he suspected all was not as he at first anticipated. He turned to the door, it was fast. He fumbled for the latch, or lock, or whatever secured it, but it was not to be found; and an instant afterwards, he heard footsteps approaching, in the darkness. His heart thumped aganst his ribs, and he began to wish himself safely out of doors again; but he was quickly reassured by the encouraging whisper of his new-made acquaint-ance, who approached him apparently with great ed upwards of 1845 bales.
